

Legal advice for you or someone you know

With the hint of possibility that we may start emerging from lockdown soon, businesses are looking to make plans for their next 'new normal'. Questions are now about getting supply chains moving again, and planning for the safe return of staff to work.

As individuals during Covid-19, many of us have made a will for the first time, and now look for further advice on how we can better plan for the unexpected events life throws at us. In this week's Ready for the Future we bring news of a webinar that is relevant, whether you're in your twenties or your eighties; and other helpful advice.

If you have a specific question you can call our free phone helpline on 0800 086 2819.

Righting the wrongs

Adrian is the founder and former CEO of ESG (Skills) Ltd, which helped people fulfil their potential through skills training. As the owner of a thriving business, Adrian thought he was in a privileged and fortunate position. But then he was the victim of three instances of unfair treatment. In each instance, we helped him successfully fight his corner.

Looking after your people

More teams are working from home and putting a greater reliance on video calls and messaging apps. Whilst technology is vital for connecting remote working colleagues, amassing data on these platforms in the process can expose employers to risk. We share our top tips for minimising the potential impacts on your business.

For you - protecting yourself and your loved ones

13th May 11am – 12noon

If the Covid-19 pandemic has you thinking about your finances, who will look after your children when you die, or the decisions you may have to make on behalf of an ill or vulnerable loved one, you're not alone. Join us and our partners Solosy Wealth Management - Partner Practice of St. James's Place Wealth Management, and St. David's Hospice Care, on Zoom.

In this webinar we bring together four experts to discuss:

- Creating security – a look at tax planning, lasting powers of attorney, beneficiaries decisions and more
- Legacies – how do you ensure the people you want to inherit from you when you die, do so?
- Opportunities – how can you make the most of your current and future financial situation?
- Supporting vulnerable people – what you need to know about planning for care or death, and how you can look after your mental health during Covid-19.
