

Unified in Separation

Your future your way

One Couple, One Lawyer

– equal support to reach an agreeable solution

It may be suitable for one of our specially-trained family lawyers to provide you and your partner with advice on a joint basis. This can help you reach an agreement on one or all aspects of your separation and achieve your shared objectives without conflict.

This is a collaborative approach to divorce and separation, and requires trusted legal guidance and transparency throughout. We can support you to reach a conclusion that meets your needs – and if you're parents, the needs of your children, too.

For us to act for you, you both need to be willing and able to deal with matters in a similar way. It is imperative that, if relevant, you both give informed consent to disclose to each other all appropriate factual and financial information to enable you to reach a joint decision.

The one lawyer approach offers a conciliatory way of resolving your issues without the expense of separate lawyers. It is often used in conjunction with early neutral evaluation, mediation, arbitration, and collaboration with other professionals.

Key benefits:

- Avoids inadvertent conflict which can arise where each party is separately represented
- Is often a quick and cost effective process.
