Jake Gransbury is a solicitor in our Employment team and works with both individuals and companies operating in the technology and innovation sectors.

Jake provides advice on a range of employment matters, whether that is at the start of a client's journey when employment contracts are first being put in place, to later down the line when a company is established and requires an employee handbook or advice on managing employees.

He also has experience in contentious matters including tribunal work and settlement agreements. He takes a pragmatic and commercial approach to these situations tailoring his advice to the client's business.

How we can help:

- Provide advice on offer letters and contract terms
- Drafting employment contracts when an offer has been made and accepted
- Ensuring your current policies and procedures are effective for the size of your business.
